2. How do I place an order?

Contact your Trading Representative and provide your account number, stock, buy or sell instruction, quantity, limit order price, trading session, fill type and validity.

3. Will my order appear in UTRADE?

No. Your submitted order and its status will not appear in UTRADE SG because the order is manually entered through a separate system.

Your Trading Representative will provide the available order-status and execution updates to you.

4. What must I do before placing an order?

You must:

- Ensure that you have sufficient trading limit for a buy order or sufficient available holdings for a sell order.
- Please check your UTRADE SG order book and cancel any existing order that may duplicate your new instruction. For example, if you have an outstanding UTRADE SG order to buy 1,000 Apple shares and wish to place the same order during extended hours, you should cancel the existing order first. If the existing order is not cancelled, both orders may be executed, resulting in the purchase of 2,000 shares.

5. When will my holdings be updated?

Your holdings will be updated in UTRADE SG on the next business day. Until then, the holdings displayed may not include your extended-hours trades.

6. Can I amend or cancel my order?

You may submit a request through your Trading Representative.

7. Is execution guaranteed?

No. Your order may be partially executed or not executed, depending on market price, liquidity and other market conditions.

8. What are the key risks?

US Extended-hours trading may involve:

- Lower liquidity
- Wider bid-ask spreads
- Higher price volatility
- Partial or non-execution
- Prices that differ from regular trading hours
- Delays in order-status, trade and holdings updates
- Duplicate execution if an existing UTRADE order is not cancelled

9. Who should I contact for an order update?

Please contact your Trading Representative. As the order will not appear in UTRADE, your Trading Representative will provide the available order-status and execution updates.
